

Dear IEJEE reader,

You are holding the third issue of volume one of International Electronic Journal of Elementary Education (IEJEE), one of the youngest and most exciting electronic journals focusing on the contemporary issues in elementary education. Approximately one tenth of today's world population has one or another way relationship with elementary education. Different socio-cultural issues, tough economic challenges and changing policies around the world affect the educational conditions for elementary students. Different countries and geographic areas steady are facing different challenges with regard to their teaching-learning agendas. On the other hand we are observing a common global interest: All the central and local educational authorities want to create better teaching conditions for elementary teachers and better learning conditions for the elementary students. Another global interest is to have access to research-based knowledge which has high quality and at the same time is relevant. I believe that IEJEE is fulfilling an important mission with that regard. I owe many thanks to all the researchers who have made their contributions to the previous issues and this third issue of IEJEE. Publishing an international scientific journal is a demanding job. Without our editorial board members and guest reviewers, it would be impossible to come so long in our work.

Dear Reader / Özerk

As an Editor-in-Chief, I have to admit that IEJEE wouldn't be there it's now without the countless hours of 'overtime' that my closest colleagues, Dr. Turan Temur, Editor, and Dr. Gökhan Özsoy, editorial board member, have devoted to this young journal. Thanks a lot Turan and Gökhan.

Sincerely

Prof. Dr. Kamil Özerk
